

Summer Academy

A hands-on residential academy at the Marshall University Joan C. Edwards School of Medicine for undergraduate students who aspire to become physicians

Monday, June 3 – Friday, June 7, 2013

Join other undergraduate students for an exciting week of exploring the opportunities and challenges of medical school. You will learn

- Interviewing skills, resume building, and MCAT preparation
- Tips from experts on the Admissions process

In addition, you will

- Participate in hands-on exercises in clinical skills
- Manage wound care and build a splint in a "wilderness" environment
- Become a member of a team that solves medical cases on a mercy ship traveling up the Amazon River – a high tech live simulation

The academy is free to students who are selected

Eligibility requirements

- West Virginia residents who are currently enrolled in a WV public or private accredited college or university
- Passed between 30 and 60 earned college hours
- Have a composite GPA of at least 3.00 for all courses
- Scored a minimum of 22 on the ACT or SAT equivalent
- Demonstrated serious interest in a medical career

Women, minorities and those who are from underrepresented groups in medicine are encouraged to apply.

NOTE: Students can complete an Application online and can download Recommendation Forms for references at <http://crh.marshall.edu/>

- Applications must be received by April 15, 2013
